CRITICAL ^{the} GLOBAL CLASSROOM

A UNIQUE STUDY-ABROAD PROGRAM IN LAW, POLICY AND SOCIAL JUSTICE ACTIVISM

THIS YEAR GO SOUTH AND

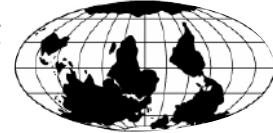

Barely a generation ago, the peoples of the South struggled against mighty and fearsome dictatorships, each a legacy of colonial conquest from the North. In Argentina, Chile, and South Africa, governments engaged in "dirty wars" against their citizens. Tens of thousands of people were murdered, tortured, and "disappeared" in accordance with government policy. Today, each of these countries struggles against its recent non-democratic history and colonial legacies to ensure social justice and human rights for all its citizens. How successful are those struggles? What counsel can these Southern countries give to countries in the North, where new "wars" are being waged – wars on drugs, wars on terrorism, wars without certain enemies or definite ends? Shall the recent history of the South become the imminent fate of the North? Journeying through Chile, Argentina and South Africa (July 5-August 15, 2004), the Critical Global Classroom (CGC) is a rigorous, hands-on, cross-disciplinary adventure in critical global education that satisfies all requirements of the American Bar Association and awards eight academic credits.

Featuring an innovative curriculum and spearheaded by a diverse team of faculty representing each host country and the U.S., the CGC is the only study-abroad law program in the world geared specifically to social justice activism and legal reform. The CGC is the only study-abroad law program that travels to multiple destinations of the global South and incorporates a four-day "Program Break" to accommodate students' interest in travel opportunities. The CGC also is the only study-abroad law program that incorporates a four-day program of activities during the LATCRIT COLLOQUIUM ON INTERNATIONAL AND COMPARATIVE LAW (August 7-11 in Cape Town), which enables students to interact with scholars and activists from various disciplines and regions of the world as part of the academic curriculum (for more information, please visit the LatCrit website at www.latcrit.com). The CGC academic calendar begins and ends to help students "split" their summers and make the most of their valuable time. All CGC academic activities are conducted conveniently on-site at well-located and comfortable hotels or nearby universities, all instruction is in English, and all course materials are provided in advance. Just as important, the total cost of program fees is about the same as, or even less than, the per-credit on-campus tuition at most or many U.S. law schools. But travel logistics limit enrollment: please apply ASAP to reserve your place prior to the April 5, 2004 enrollment deadline!
