THIS YEAR GO SOUTH AND TURN REALITY

The South African government imposed apartheid against the majority of its citizens in 1948. In 1973, the democratically-elected government of Chile was overthrown in a military coup. Three years later, Argentina's military overthrew that country's government. Argentina, Chile, and South Africa engaged in "dirty wars" against their citizens. Tens of thousands of people were murdered, tortured, and "disappeared" in accordance with government policy. Today, each of these countries struggles against its recent non-democratic history as well as its colonial legacy as it moves towards a regime of social justice and the provision of human rights for all its citizens.

These struggles continue sparking increasingly urgent comparisons among critical global thinkers everywhere: which overarching human rights lessons should activists, policymakers, lawyers and others draw from South America and South Africa ... what precautionary insights might they counsel to the North, whose people now live under the lengthening shadows of new 'wars' without any certain foe nor seeming end ... shall the recent history of the South become the imminent fate of the North? Journeying through Chile, Argentina and South Africa (July 5-August 15, 2004), the Critical Global Classroom (CGC) is a six-week study abroad program for students from any discipline to develop independent responses to these and similar queries. Featuring an innovative curriculum and spearheaded by a diverse team of faculty representing each host country and the U.S., the CGC is a rigorous, hands-on, cross-disciplinary adventure in critical global education that satisfies all requirements of the American Bar Association (ABA) and awards eight academic credits.

The CGC is the only study-abroad law program in the world organized around social justice activism and legal reform. The CGC is the only study-abroad law program that travels to multiple destinations of the global South and incorporates a four-day "Program Break" to accommodate students' interest in travel opportunities. The CGC also is the only study-abroad law program that integrates into its curriculum a four-day program of interactive activities during the LATCRIT COLLOQUIUM ON INTERNATIONAL AND COMPARATIVE LAW (August 7-11 in Cape Town — visit www.latcrit.com). The CGC academic calendar also begins and ends to help students "split" their summers and make the most of their time. All CGC academic activities are conducted conveniently on-site at well-located and comfortable hotels or nearby universities, all instruction is in English, and all course materials are provided in advance. Just as important, the total cost of fees to spend six weeks abroad is about the same as, or even less than, the per-credit on-campus tuition at most or many U.S. law schools. In design and substance, the CGC aims to provide a high-value and cost-effective opportunity to study law, policy and social justice activism among likeminded faculty and peers. But group travel logistics limit the total enrollment; visit our website now to apply early and reserve your place in this unique experience studying abroad!
