

2023

SYMPOSIUM SUBMISSION GUIDELINES DEADLINE AND INSTRUCTIONS

LatCrit 2023

The Guidelines outlined below are designed to provide all Faculty Development Workshop (FDW) and LatCrit 2023 registrants and attendees with the necessary information to submit a timely essay for publication in the symposium that will be published based on this Conference. Although we expect program participants to submit symposium essays, ALL attendees or registrants are invited to do so; whether or not your name appeared in the Conference program, you are invited to participate in the symposium by submitting an essay inspired by the Conference.

The LatCrit 2023 symposium will be published by Seattle Journal of Social Justice (SJSJ) and possibly another law review. This publication follows the previous LatCrit symposia, most of which similarly commemorate and memorialize our gatherings. These symposia also help to nudge along the production of critical knowledge on socio-legal issues of special significance to subordinated communities and groups. To review past symposia, please visit the LatCrit website at www.latcrit.org. We expect the published version of LatCrit 2023 will be as powerful as the live version (or more so). Please plan ahead NOW to make sure that you will be able to meet the December 15, 2023 deadline, which is ample time given the length and nature of the pieces (see below).

Generally, symposium essays are a form of “oral essay” conveying a basic sense of the Conference to those unable to attend. Essays should engage and elaborate upon comments, observations or exchanges occurring during the conference, and may address or extend to any social or legal matters affecting subordinated communities and groups. Due to space limitations, there is strict limit of 10,000 words (including footnotes) for each essay. Footnoting is not at a premium: include footnotes wherever you think they will be useful, but do not feel compelled to footnote extensively. Please format your footnotes according to the latest edition of The Bluebook.

Once we have received all timely essays, we will work on creating “clusters” of 3-5 essays each organized around a common theme. These clusters of essays serve as the functional equivalent of program panels. Thus, each cluster will begin with a brief Introduction. In addition, the symposium as a whole will open with a Foreword designed to situate the entire publication within the landscape of critical outsider jurisprudence. Finally, the symposium will conclude with an Afterword that will highlight some particular aspect or concept from that year’s conference and symposium. To become more familiar with the overall structure of the LatCrit symposia, as well as previously published essays, please visit the LatCrit website that contain all the past LatCrit symposia.

Once the timely received essays have been organized into thematic clusters, we will submit them as a whole to the law review/s that have agreed to publish the conference proceedings. At that time, the law review editors will make their independent decisions regarding the publication of any particular text or essay. Although we therefore cannot guarantee in advance that every submission will be published, we do endeavor to create a good working relationship with the law review editors and to help them resolve any doubts they may have regarding the publication of any piece. In the past, we have been successful in developing positive working relationships with editors of various journals to rectify perceived problems with any submissions and ensure the publication of all well-crafted essays. We hope and intend the same for this year.

All submissions must be received no later than December 15, 2023 as a Word (MSWord 95 or above) attachment. Please make sure your submission conforms to the strict limit of 10,000 words (including footnotes). If you cite materials other than traditionally used in U.S. legal scholarship, for example economic or international literature, it is imperative that you retain and provide photocopies of unusual sources if requested by the editors. This advance consideration will help the editors (and us) ensure a smooth and timely publication schedule. We look forward to receiving your timely essay at the end of the fall semester, and hope that the intervening time is both enjoyable and productive!

Please send your submissions as e-mail attachments to Profs. Tayyab Mahmud and Beth Lyon at mahmud@seattleu.edu and mbl235@cornell.edu.
